A FUTURE CHRISTMAS

We will open our presents on Christmas Eve as usual, sitting by our Christmas Tree with lights lit by Solar Power. NOW TALKING AS IF I WERE LIVING IN THIS FUTURE TIME. One large box addressed to me catches my eye. It is a new robot. Just what I need! I have been wanting another one to load and unload my dishes from my solar-powered dishwasher. My darling husband picks the nicest gifts! I gave him a typewriter that types the words you dictate without your having to use your hands. We will then open the few other gifts.

The next day we plan to take a one-day visit to the moon to see a relative who is stationed there. He is in the Air Force and has been living there for six months.

There are about 1,000 people living on the moon, since one side, the side facing the earth, has been completely covered by a pressure-resistant-plastic-glass-dome-shaped outfit. Plant life grows abundantly and the oxygen supply has been taken care of by large oxygen-producing factories.

The trip takes an hour by rocket which gives us plenty of time to enjoy ourselves on Christmas Day. We will zoom back to earth the next day on a Pan Am Rocket.

We anxiously await the New Year for a new century will begin. We'll be in the 21st century.

DEAR SANTA

I have been a good boy this year because I've only killed 12 people I did not like. I told Daddy that 16 people were gossiping against the state. They were banished to the Salt Mines. Last year you gave me a Junior Deformer Kit. It worked fine Boy, you should see what I've done to all my babe sitters! This year I would like a Senior Deformer Kit and a Senior Dissecting Kit. Please send me a Nixon Voodoo Doll and lots of pins. I would like a Bomb Kit with red buttons just like Daddy's.

Oh, and Santa, I'm not one to complain but last year you gave me a Beheading Kit. Well, I tried it on Mama and the blade was too dull. Her head only came half off. It only made a mess on my bathroom floor. So could you please send me a sharper blade?

Yours truly,
Melven Kruschev

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS
From The Wonder Book

Every year, on December 25th, we celebrate Christmas. Christmas is the most wonderful Holiday of the year. On Christmas Eve, Santa brings gifts for everyone. Christmas trees are decorated with brightly colored ornaments. On Christmas Day, the whole family has dinner together & everyone opens his presents.

Best of all, Christmas is the day when we promise ourselves that we will always help other people & love everyone.
